Our philosophy from 75 years of international experience

The term „OUTWARD BOUND“ comes from the seafaring industry, describing the condition of a ship ready and about to leave the safe harbour to „put to sea“ on a voyage of discovery. Progressive educator Kurt Hahn was the founder and namesake of OUTWARD BOUND. This description was used as a synonym for the preparation of young people for the „Great Journey of Life“. Full speed ahead until land is in sight. The tradition continues. As a pioneer of experiential education, Kurt Hahn set the foundations for OUTWARD BOUND in England over 75 years ago. Since then we have been implementing his concepts in more than 35 countries worldwide in an innovative and competent way, working with a large number of international schools. We orient ourselves according to the guiding principles „learning through experience“ and „learning with the head, heart and hand“. These principles remain the central starting point in our programs.

OUTWARD BOUND Germany

In Germany, we have been offering experiential learning courses for youth character development in the wilderness since 1951. As skilled educational partners, we work with a variety of international schools, public schools, social institutions, colleges and companies.

Approach

Our primary methodology unfolds „in the natural world“. Students build character during challenging day-long expeditions - on a grueling mountain ascent, a hike in the forest or an adventure on the water.

We passionately support young people in their personal development with individual challenges in unfamiliar surroundings. In our seminars we test our participants' limits and provoke the first step out of their comfort zone. Of course, physical and mental safety always has top priority.

Through our holistic course concept, the reliance on group work, reflections on collected experiences and group facilitation methods, we ensure that the experience resonates through to everyday life, long after the seminar has ended. The knowledge gained has a lasting influence on working as a team, and on the participants' individual lives.

OUTWARD BOUND

We will challenge you, we will guide you, and we will experience adventures together!

” OUTWARD BOUND trips challenge our students both mentally and physically in a way that they cannot experience at school. The reflective component of the courses makes them an excellent Pre-IB Diploma experience. “
